Ethnographic Village

Installed in Largo da Restauração, the Ethnographic Village presents live examples of local traditions, crafts, food, folklore and two traditional nativity scenes, promoting the tangible and intangible culture of Madeira.

There are two types of traditional nativity scenes: the traditional Madeiran nativity scene located outside, which reproduces the human and natural landscape with vegetation, terraces, valleys, ravines, little houses and haystacks; and the tiered nativity scene, with its characteristic elements such as the Child Jesus, bows, fruit, grains and bread, amongst others.

Childbirth Masses

The religious celebrations preceding the 25 of December begin with a “novena” called “Childbirth Masses”, which are celebrated in the early hours of the morning from the 16 to the 23 of December.

During the religious ceremony the faithful sing popular chants in honour of the Mother of God and the Child Jesus, whose birth is approaching.

At the end of the Mass, people gather in the churchyard to socialise and enjoy local folklore groups while tasting regional delicacies such as “broas de mel” (honey biscuits), coffee, liqueurs and the typical “poncha”.

“Cantar os Reis” – Twelfth Night Songs

The New Year's festivities last until mid-January. During this period, masses are celebrated in praise of Child Jesus and mangers are kept in many of Madeiran households.

On 6 of January the arrival of the Three Kings is celebrated with the famous “Bolo-Rei”, which has a “fava” bean and a small prize hidden inside. Tradition says that the person whose slice contains the bean must buy the cake on the following year and the person with the prize will have to buy the drinks.

In Funchal's Municipal Garden, on 5 of January at 21h00, takes place a public concert under the theme “Twelfth night songs” in a show that intends to revive this popular local tradition.
